LANGUAGE – A TOOL FOR SURVIVAL

By Mrs L.N Deshpande

ACCENTS

- ▶ Rule 1: Each word with two or more syllables has one syllable whose vowel is accented. For example, for-gét.
- ▶ Rule 2: A long word may have more than one accent. The vowel that is stressed more or most is called the primary accent. The primary accent is key to many of the spelling rules. A second accented vowel is called the secondary accent. For example, rón-ver-sá-tion. Very long words can have even more accented vowel sounds, but only one primary accent.

Leadership Styles

1. Autocratic or Authoritarian Leadership:

- An autocratic leader exercises complete control over the subordinates.
- He centralises power in himself and takes all decisions without consulting the subordinates.

- Autocratic leadership style may be appropriate when subordinates are uneducated, unskilled and submissive.
- Lack of knowledge and experience of the subordinates makes it necessary for the leader to take decisions himself.
- This style may be desirable when the company enforces punishment as accepted disciplinary techniques.

- This can be appropriate when you need to make decisions quickly, when there's no need for team input, and when team agreement is not necessary for a successful outcome.

2. Democratic or Participative Leadership:

- A consultative or democratic leader takes decisions in consultation and participation with the subordinates.

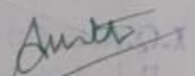

- He dominates and drives his group through force and command.
- He loves power and never delegates authority.
- The leader gives orders and expects the subordinates to follow them unquestioningly.
- He uses rewards and holds threat of penalties to direct the subordinates.

- He decentralises authority and allows the subordinates to share his power.
- The leader does what the group wants to follow the majority opinion.
- He keeps the followers informed about matters affecting them.
- A democratic leader provides freedom of thinking and expression.

Leadership

- Acc to Koontz and O' Donnell has defined leadership as "Influencing people to follow the achievement of a common goal. It is the ability to exert inter-personal influence by means of communication towards the achievement of a goal".

Meaning

- Leadership is the process of influencing the behaviour of others towards the accomplishment of goals in a given situation.

- James Giribbin defines leadership as " a process of influence on a group in a particular situation, at a given point of time and in a specific set of circumstances that stimulate people to strive willingly to attain organisational objectives giving them the experience of helping attain the common objectives and satisfaction with the type of leadership provided."

Features of Leadership

- It is the process of influencing the behaviour of others to work willingly and enthusiastically for achieving predetermined goals.

- Leadership is a continuous and dynamic process of influencing others. It is not one-shot activity. It is complex and multi-dimensional in character.
- Leadership is a working relationship between the leader and his followers. This relationship arises out of their functioning for common goals.

- He listens to the suggestions, grievances and opinions of the subordinates.
- Democratic leaders make the final decisions, but they include team members in the decision-making process.
- They encourage creativity, and people are often highly engaged in projects and decisions.
- As a result, team members tend to have high job satisfaction and high productivity.

- They provide support with resources and advice if needed, but otherwise they don't get involved.
- This autonomy can lead to high job satisfaction, but it can be damaging if team members don't manage their time well, or if they don't have the knowledge, skills, or self motivation to do their work effectively.

- Consultative leadership is considered to be more effective than autocratic style.
- When the goal of the organisation is job satisfaction and when employees have a high need for independence, consultative style is more effective.
- It is also appropriate where subordinates have accepted the goal of the organisation and when the leader wants to share the decision making with the subordinates.

3. Free-rein or laissez-faire leadership:

- This involves complete delegation of authority so that subordinates themselves take decisions.
- leaders give their team members a lot of freedom in how they do their work, and how they set their deadlines.
- The free-rein leader avoids power and gives up the leadership position.
- He serves only as a contact to bring the information and resources needed by the subordinates.

- The purpose of leadership is to achieve common goal or goals. By exercising leadership, the leader tries to influence the behaviour of individuals or group of individuals around him to achieve common goals.
- A leader influences his followers willingly not by force. A leader shows the way by his own example. He is not a pusher but sets an ideal before his followers by his personal conduct.

2. Building morale: Morale is attitudes of the employees towards organisation and voluntary cooperation of the employees. High morale leads to high productivity and organisational stability. Good leadership in the organisation ensures high employee morale which increases the productivity and stability of the organisation.

- Leadership is exercised in a given situation, at a given point of time, and under specific set of circumstances. It implies that leadership styles may be different under different situations.
- Leadership is a power relationship in which power and influence are unevenly distributed. The person holding power over other members of the group becomes the leader.
- Leadership is a social interaction-influence process between the leader and his followers. It is an interpersonal process of influencing behaviour.

3. Guiding people: A leader is to guide and direct the group. He acts as a friend, philosopher and guide to his followers and takes the lead in all activities.

4. Developing teamwork: A leader acts as the captain of his team in order to win the confidence and cooperation of his followers. A leader secures cooperation and coordination by setting good example through his own conduct.

IMPORTANCE OF LEADERSHIP

1. Creating confidence : a good leader may create confidence in his followers by directing them, giving them advice, and getting through them good results in the organisation. The individual tries to maintain the good work and acquires certain level of confidence towards his capacity. If there is no good direction individuals fail to recognise their qualities and capabilities.

5. Maintaining Discipline: Discipline is the force that prompts individuals to observe rules, regulations and procedures which are necessary for the attainment of objectives.

6. Representing the group: A leader is the true representative of his followers both to those working for the group as well as the outside world. He carries the voice of his people to various authorities.

Team Building

2. Self managed team:

These are group of 10-15 employees who perform highly related or interdependent jobs and take on many of the responsibilities of their former supervisors.

Definition

Team is primarily a group whose individual effort result in performance that is greater than the sum of individual inputs.

Team generate positive synergy through coordinated effort that enables the organisation to attain higher levels of performance.

3. Cross functional team

These teams are made up of employees from about the same hierarchical level but from different work areas, who come together to accomplish a task.

Types of team

1. Problem solving team

Group of 5 to 12 employees from the same dept. who meet for a few hours each week to discuss ways of improving quality, efficiency and the work environment. Members share ideas or offer suggestions on processes and methods can be impro

4. Virtual team

Teams that use computer technology to tie together physically dispersed members in order to achieve a common goal.

CREATIVE THINKING

Don't limit yourself. To a significant degree, how you think about your creative ability will determine its presence. If you generate self talk that insists that "I'm just not a creative person" or that creativity is the province of genius, then you are limiting your own ability to exercise your inborn creative talents.

● Definition

A way of looking at problems or situations from a fresh perspective that suggests unorthodox solutions (which may look unsettling at first). Creative thinking can be stimulated both by an unstructured process such as brainstorming, and by a structured process such as lateral thinking. Thinking creatively is taking what is already known and using it as a base to create something entirely new.

Avoid premature evaluation New ideas need a chance to wander around for awhile, to learn to walk and develop their potential. All of us have had the experience of someone passing judgment on an idea of ours (e.g., "That's stupid ... or impractical ... or unrealistic ... or naive ... or too idealistic"). Give new ideas some room to grow!

● How to enhance personal creativity

Focus your energy. Creativity requires significant mental resources of energy. If your energy is scattered among many competing projects, you may not have enough energy focused at any one time and place to realize your creative potential. Highly creative people are able to focus their energy on their work.

Don't be afraid to make a mistake. Most of us are programmed to fear making a mistake. The more creative you are, the more likely you are to make mistakes. Creativity involves stretching the limits of the known into unknown territory. The key is to try to not make the same mistakes over and over again, and to learn something from the mistakes that you do make.

I.Q.A.C. Coordinator
R.L. Law College,
Belagavi

Principal
R.L. Law College
BELAGAVI

Break out of established patterns.

Are you a creature of habit? If you want to enhance your creativity, it is important to disrupt your life and your thinking in constructive ways. Eat something that you've never eaten before. Read a book that justifies a point of view different than your own. Try a new opinion on for size. Try to look at things in a different light.

Verify your assumptions. Thinking is often limited by the assumptions it is based upon. If you are trying to design a new chair and assume that it must have four legs, this assumption will limit the scope of your design; it would eliminate a three legged chair, a five legged chair, a chair with no legs, and so forth.

Try brainstorming. Brainstorming is a tried and true method of generating creative ideas. This process involves freely generating as many ideas as possible and totally holding any evaluation of them in reserve. This process works best with a small group of people, taking advantage of a stimulating cross fertilization of ideas. You may want to try some career possibility brainstorming with a group of your friends or classmates.

Expand your associations. We tend to fall into patterns of uncreative thinking by unconsciously limiting how we associate things. If you think of college only as a means of obtaining a better job, you will be unduly limiting your educational possibilities. The college experience can also be associated with personal growth, social networking, mentoring by professors, exploration of different values

Expand your associations and you will expand your experience; expand your experience and you will expand your knowledge and your life.

Utilize thinking stimulants. Different things stimulate creative openness for different people. Some people prefer silence and solitude; others want the stimulation that interaction with others can provide.

Classical music suits some; hard rock or country music works for others. Some people are early morning creators while others do their best work late at night. Take the time to observe the conditions that seem to foster your most creative work. You can then consciously use these conditions to increase your creative susceptibility.

Get silly every now and then.

Humor is a powerful creative stimulus. If you insist on being dead serious about everything, your ideas are likely to be seriously dead. Creativity should be more like play than work. A playful attitude can open up new avenues of thinking and interacting with others, often leading to a kind of synergistic teamwork that fosters creativity and novelty.

The four stages are:

Preparation
Incubation
Illumination
Verification

Stage One: Preparation (the conscious state)

In this stage the aim is to acquire more information about the problem than you already possess. You might brainstorm, read, collaborate with others, gather your own past experiences, anything that can help you move towards solving the problem at hand. The stage of preparation may vary in length from a few minutes, as in the case of a brainstorming session, to months or years, as in the preparation for an invention or a crucial experiment where more research needs to be done.

Stage Two: Incubation (the subconscious state)

Stop thinking of the problem and turn your attention to anything else. Go for a run, a walk, play with your kids, read or maybe build that fence you have been meaning to finish. Do anything that stimulates your mind, but does not involve solving your problem. You are going to give your unconscious mind time to digest all the material you gathered in the preparation stage. This is the same principal used to solve "mental block" or "writers block". The incubation stage can last from a few minutes to years. For example, a writer working on a book may write for 4 days straight, then not write for months. After incubating, go back to your problem and begin crafting a solution or idea. At the end of this stage, the idea, which has been incubating, is more clearly defined than it was at the beginning. The stages of preparation and incubation might overlap, but that's ok.

Stage Three: Illumination (The "Ahaaa!" Moment.)

This is where the idea, which has been incubating, assumes definite form. Better known as the "Ahaa! Moment". This is the feeling you get when you have been struggling with your thoughts and can't quite put your finger on what is missing. The idea will appear suddenly and comes with a feeling of certainty. You will typically have an emotional reaction of joy, knowing you have found an idea, a solution.

CREATIVE THINKING

Don't limit yourself. To a significant degree, how you think about your creative ability will determine its presence. If you generate self talk that insists that "I'm just not a creative person" or that creativity is the province of genius, then you are limiting your own ability to exercise your inherent creative talents.

Definition

A way of looking at problems or situations from a fresh perspective that suggests unorthodox solutions (which may look unsettling at first). Creative thinking can be stimulated both by an unstructured process such as brainstorming, and by a structured process such as lateral thinking.

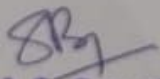

Thinking creatively is taking what is already known and using it as a base to create something entirely new.

Avoid premature evaluation New ideas need a chance to wander around for awhile, to learn to walk and develop their potential. All of us have had the experience of someone passing judgment on an idea of ours (e.g., "That's stupid ... or impractical ... or unrealistic ... or naive ... or too idealistic"). Give new ideas some room to grow!

How to enhance personal creativity

Focus your energy. Creativity requires significant mental resources of energy. If your energy is scattered among many competing projects, you may not have enough energy focused at any one time and place to realize your creative potential. Highly creative people are able to focus their energy on their work.

Don't be afraid to make a mistake. Most of us are programmed to fear making a mistake. The more creative you are, the more likely you are to make mistakes. Creativity involves stretching the limits of the known into unknown territory. The key is to try to not make the same mistakes over and over again, and to learn something from the mistakes that you do make.

Stage Four: Verification

This is where you challenge the idea that came to you in the Illumination stage. Does your solution work and/or does it need revision? For example, a musician plays his composition on the appropriate musical instrument to see what notes and chords should be changed.
